PREFACE.

As there is unfortunately no fixed standard for the orthography of certain words in English, and as it may be expected that I should assign my reasons for the mode I have, after much reflection, deemed it advisable to adopt; I will here reiterate what I have before stated in another language, in the former part of this Dictionary. The mode of spelling chiefly in dispute is with reference to those words derived from the Latin, which in that language terminate in or, such as honor, color, vigor, &c. Many authors of repute write these words as they are written in Latin, and in diplomacy this method is generally adopted; others admit the u subsequent to the o, and write the same words honour, colour, vigour, &c. alleging as a reason that such words are derived through the medium of the French, in which language the u is admitted. Without wishing to dogmatise on this point, I will simply say that, if such reason be admissible, it would seem that another letter, namely the e, should also be admitted, which has certainly never been attempted by any writer; and it might be argued, even if the French origin be conceded, that the orthography of an infinity of other words, such as mortal, eternal, &c., should be changed, to meet a similar requisition. The arguments for the French derivation appear to me gratuitous, and I have therefore considered such words as purely Latin, and written them accordingly; while in those which have no such derivation, as Saviour, endeavour &c., I have adopted the u, as having been omitted in them without sufficient consideration.

A still stronger argument may be adduced for the omission of the u in words coming from the Latin; as in horror and terror, which have assuredly the same derivation, as honor &c., such letter is never employed.

Another, and as it seems to me, far less defensible anomaly, exists in that class of words in which the final consonant is doubled in the terminations in ing, ed, er &c., as in travelling instead of traveling, bigotted instead of bigoted, traveller instead of tra- veler &c. This anomaly is unfortunately so much diffused that the authority of Horace, « si volet usus, » may be almost pleaded in its defence; but it seems so vicious in principle that, after mature reflection, I have determined to adopt the contrary system, especially, as I have for doing so the authority of several authors, and amongst others, of Dr. Webster in his modern Dictionary. Lindley Murray in his Grammar, which is in many respects good authority, gives the following rule for the orthography of words of this kind:

« Words ending with a single consonant, preceded by a single vowel, and with the accent on the last syllable, upon assuming an additional syllable beginning with a consonant, double the consonant: as, to abet, an abettor; to begin, a beginner; a fen, fenny; wit, witty; thin, thinnish, &c.

Dr Webster in his Dictionary adopts the same rule, and amplifies upon it as follows:

« Words in which the final consonant is not doubled in adding such formatives as ING, ED, ER &c. It is a rule extending to many hundreds of cases that, in adding to a word such formatives as ing, ed, er &c., a single consonant at the end of a word is doubled when the accent falls on the last syllable, as in getting, beginning; but is not doubled when the accent falls on any preceding syllable, as in benefiting, gardener &c. This rule has been violated in the case of about fifty words ending in l, whose derivatives have had the l doubled, as traveller &c. These words are here restored to their analogous spelling, as recommended by Walker, Lowth, Perry, and others, as in traveling, canceled, leper, counselor, duelist, marvelous &c. On the same principle woollen is spelt woolen. It does not interfere with this rule that chancellor, and the derivatives of metal and crystal, as metalline, metallurgy, crystallize &c., have the l doubled, since they come directly from the Latin cancellarius and metallum, and the Greek μεταλλος. The above rule is also applied to the derivatives of worship and bias, making them worshipping, worshiped, worshiper, biasing, biased. Bigoted has also taken its true spelling with but one t, and such should be the spelling of carbureted, sulphureted &c. »

Strengthened by such authorities (which are wholly in accordance with my own preconceived opinions), I have, after much reflection, determined to adhere to this system, though I am aware it will have many opponents: it seems to me that the rule is founded on a truly logical principle; and, whilst recognizing in its full force that based on established use, yet even this, when clearly erroneous, should bend to reason. It may be added that a system should be consistent with itself, and, though every one writes preferring with the double r, as being derived from prefer, in which word the accent falls on the last syllable; no one would,

I think, venture to spell proffering, derived from proffer, in which the accent falls on the first syllable, in a similar manner, which it should be if traveler, traveling, &c. are rightly written with the double l.

Unfortunately there exist few rules for the orthography of the English language; and I would adduce it as an additional argument for the system I have adopted, that such rules, when given by authors of known credit, should be esteemed too precious to be laid aside without sufficient cause.

With regard to the class of words, the derivatives of which being monosyllables, terminate with a double l, as fulness, skillful &c.; I have also followed the rule laid down by Lindley Murray, that is, to omit one l; as also in the compound words handful, dunghil, foretel, chilblain &c.

Words ending in e mute, such as blame, cure &c., when incorporated with the adjuncts able and ible, seem to be written faultily by many in not omitting the e mute, as blameable, cureable &c. These words should be spelt blamable, curable. An exception to this naturally arises when the e mute is preceded by c, or by g, when it takes the soft pronunciation, as in peace, peaceable; change, changeable, &c.

For a similar reason, when the adjuncts ing or ish, are united with words that terminate in e mute, this letter should be omitted: as place, placing; lodge, lodging; slave, slavish; prude, prudish, &c.

These are the principal variations admitted by modern authors in the orthography of the English language; some others, mentioned by Lindley Murray, are now generally reduced to one standard; and it were much to be desired that some competent authority could be discovered, not only for fixing the true orthography of every word in our language, but also the sound of many words, which are pronounced differently by persons of education; such as either, neither, knowledge, patent, tabret, &c.

SHORT ITALIAN GRAMMAR.

Of the Articles.

There are three articles in Italian: the definite, the indefinite, and the partitive.

OF THE DEFINITE ARTICLE.

The definite article, the, is expressed in Italian by il, lo, and la, for the singular, which are changed for the plural into i, gli, and le. Il and lo are employed for the masculine gender, la for the feminine.

The different cases of the Latin nouns are supplied in Italian by prepositions, which are termed segnacasi.

Di for the genitive case, which before a vowel becomes d'.

A for the dative.

Da for the ablative.

Il is used before a masculine noun beginning with any consonant, except an s followed by another consonant, which is called s impura: il sole, the sun; il libro, the book.

Lo is prefixed to nouns of the masculine gender beginning with an s impura: lo spirito, the spirit; lo scoglio, the rock.

Lo is also, for the most part, used before nouns of the masculine gender which commence with a z: lo zio, the uncle; lo zucchero, the sugar.

Lo is also used before nouns of the masculine gender beginning with a vowel, but in such case the o is elided: l'uomo, the man; l'esercito, the army.

La is employed before nouns of the feminine gender beginning with a consonant: la casa, the house; la città, the city. Like lo, it suffers an elision before nouns which commence with a vowel: l'ora, the hour; l'erba, the grass.

In the plural gli is contracted only before an i: gl'idoli, the idols; in other cases the i is retained: gli uomini, the men; gli eserciti, the armies.

Le is contracted only before an e: l'epoche, the epochs; l'else, the handles: in other instances the e is retained: le amiche, the (female) friends; le ore, the hours. It is also retained, even in nouns beginning with an e, in which the singular and the plural are alike: le età, the ages.

It is a peculiarity of the Italian language that when the prepositions con, with; in, in; per, for; and su, upon, are followed by the article, they become incorporated as follows.

With the	before the article il , is translated by	col , coi , or co'
	before the article lo ,	by collo , cogli , or con lo , con gli .
	before the article la .	by colla , colle , or con la , con le .
In the	before the article il , is translated by	nel , nei , or ne' .
	before the article lo ,	by nello , negli .
	before the article la ,	by nella , nelle .
For the	before the article il , is translated by	pel , pei , or pe' .
	before the article lo ,	by pello , pegli , or per lo , per gli .
	before the article la ,	by pella , pelle , per la , per le .
On the	before the article il , is translated by	sul , sui , or su' .
	before the article lo ,	by sullo , sugli .
	before the article la ,	by sulla , sulle .

As the definite article in Italian is used to express the gender and number of the substantive to which it refers, it is necessarily employed, even when the substantive is taken in a general sense, which is not the case in English:

Virtue is estimable.	La virtù è stimabile.
Man is mortal.	L'uomo è mortale.

It is also employed before the names of countries and provinces:

-England and France are separated by the Channel.	L'Inghilterra e la Francia sono separate dalla Manica.
-Normandy is a fine province.	La Normandia è una bella provincia.

Also before substantives which indicate a title, even when such substantive is followed by a proper name:

-Queen Victoria.	La regina Vittoria.
-King Victor Emmanuel.	Il re Vittorio Emanuele.

Also before substantives which refer to languages, sciences, arts, etc.

My brother studies -English, and -Mathematics.	Mio fratello studia l'inglese e la matematica.
My sister speaks -Italian well.	Mia sorella parla bene l'italiano.

Also before colors taken substantively in a general and indefinite sense:

-Black and -white are contrary colors.	Il nero ed il bianco sono colori diversi.
-Red hurts the eyes more than -green.	Il rosso fa più male agli occhi che il verde.

Also before the following nouns:

-Paradise.	Il paradiso.	-Hell.	L'inferno.
-Heaven.	Il cielo.	-Nature	La natura.

Also before the names of the elements, even when taken in a general sense.

The ancients recognized four elements: -air, -earth, -fire, and -water.	Gli antichi riconoscevano quattro elementi: l'aria, la terra, il fuoco, e l'acqua.
---	---

Also before the names of the seasons, even when taken in a like general sense:

-Spring is more pleasant than -winter. La primavera è più piacevole dell'inverno.
The heats of -summer produce the fruits I caldi de'll' estate producono i frutti of autumn. dell'autunno.

There are two cases in which the definite article is rejected in Italian, when it is employed in English:

1st before the ordinal numbers:

Henry the first.	Enrico primo.
Charles the fifth.	Carlo quinto.

2nd before adjectives and adverbs in the comparative, in phrases in which the latter part of the proposition is the consequence of the former:

The richer he is, the more avaricious -Più è ricco, -più è avaro.
he becomes.
The more amiable you are, the more you -Più diventerete amabile, -più sarete will be beloved. amato.

The pronominal possessive adjective, which is employed in English before nouns which indicate any member of the body, or faculty of the mind, is translated in Italian with the definite article.

Peter has broken his leg.	Pietro si è rotta la gamba.
The master has cut his finger.	Il maestro si è tagliato il dito.

OF THE INDEFINITE ARTICLE.

The indefinite article, a or an, is expressed in Italian by un or uno, for the masculine, and by una for the feminine.

Un is placed before words beginning with any other consonant than an s impura: un libro, a book; un regno, a kingdom.

Also before words beginning with a vowel; un amico, a friend; un oriuolo, a watch.

Uno is used before words beginning with an s impura: uno specchio, a looking-glass; uno strepito, a noise.

Also before words beginning with a z: uno zio, an uncle; uno zoccolo, a hoof.

Una is employed before feminine nouns beginning with a consonant: una casa, a house; una bottega, a shop. Before a vowel it is subject to the elision of the a, which is in such case substituted by an apostrophe: un' ora, an hour; un' anima, a soul.

This article is suppressed in Italian when joined in English to a noun which expresses the country, profession, etc. of the subject of the verb: Quest'uomo è francese, quello è inglese; this man is a Frenchman, that an Englishman; ella è madre, she is a mother. Also before a noun in apposition to another: Monte Rosa, altissima montagna della Svizzera, Mount Rosa, a very high mountain in Switzerland; l'Amazzone, — grandissimo fiume, The Amazon, a very large river. Also before the title of a work. — Dizionario, italiano-inglese: An Italian and English Dictionary.

In transactions relative to buying and selling, the indefinite article used in English in such cases, is changed in Italian, into the definite article. Il tè si vende quattro scellini LA libbra, Tea is sold at four shillings a pound.

OF THE PARTITIVE ARTICLE.

The partitive article, which is used to signify a part or portion of a thing, is expressed in Italian by del, dello, della, dei, degli, delle: Datemi DEL pane, give me some bread; ho comprato delle arancie, I have bought some oranges.

OF SUBSTANTIVES.

Of Gender.

Nouns substantive have only two genders in Italian, the masculine, and the feminine.

Names of men, and of titles, professions, etc. belonging to the male sex, are masculine. Giovanni, John; Enrico, Henry; imperatore, emperor; re, king; medico, physician; avvocato, barrister, etc.

Names of women, and of titles, professions, etc. belonging to the female sex, are feminine. Maria, Mary; Giulia, Julia; imperatrice, empress; regina, queen; poetessa, poetess; levatrice, midwife, etc.

Nouns ending in a, are for the most part feminine: casa, house; città, city; strada, street.

The exceptions are nouns derived from the Greek: anagramma, anagram; clima, climate; sistema, system; tema, theme etc.

Nouns ending in e are more difficult to determine, some being masculine, others feminine. Those terminating in me, nte, pe, re, and one, are for the most part masculine, except fame, hunger; speme, used poetically for hope; mente, mind; corrente, current; sorgente, source; gente, people; lente, lentil; ape, bee; volpe, fox; siepe, hedge; rupe, rock; stirpe, stock; febbre, fever; coltre, counterpane; polvere, dust; scure, ax; torre, tower; canzone, song; arbore, tree; aere, air; folgore, thunderbolt; cenere, ashes; lepre, hare; carcere, prison; fronte, forehead; fonte, fountain. Fine, end, and trave, beam, are of both genders. Words ending in ione are for the most part feminine.

Nouns ending in i, are feminine. Napoli, Naples; Metropoli, Metropolis; ipotesi, hypothesis. The exceptions are abbici, alphabet; barbagianni, owl; brindisi, a toast; stuzzicadenti, toothpick; cavastivali, boot jack; Tamigi, Thames; dì, day, and its compounds; eclissi, eclipse; and numerals ending in i, as dieci, ten, etc. Genesi, Genesis, is of both genders.

Nouns ending in o are masculine: Palazzo, palace; tugurio, hut. The only exceptions are mano, hand, and some few poetical abbreviations.

Nouns ending in u are feminine: Virtù, virtue; grù, crane.
Perù, Peru, is masculine: Corfù, Corfu, of both genders.

Of Number.

There are two numbers in Italian, the singular, and the plural.

Nouns of the masculine gender, change their final letter into i for the plural: cavallo, horse, cavalli, horses; poeta, poet, poeti, poets; leone, lion, leoni, lions.

Nouns of the feminine gender, ending in a, change their final letter into e: donna, woman, donne, women.

Nouns ending in e, change that vowel into i: padre, father, padri, fathers; madre, mother, madri, mothers.

Nouns terminating in i, do not change in the plural: barbagianni, owl, or owls; brindisi, a toast or toasts.

Nouns ending in o change that letter into i: mano, a hand, mani hands.

Nouns ending in u, are invariable as to number: virtù, virtue or virtues; grù, crane or cranes.

Nouns ending in ca or ga take an h in the plural before the final vowel, to preserve the hard sound: mucca, cow, mucche, cows; bottega, shop, botteghe, shops; duca, duke, duchi, dukes; collega, colleague, colleghe, colleagues.

Nouns ending in co and go, of not more than two syllables, for a similar reason take an h in the plural before the final vowel, solco, furrow, solchi, furrows; lago, lake, laghi, lakes: except porco, pig, and Greco, a Greek, which make porci, and Greci. Words, however, of similar terminations, of more than two syllables, do not admit the h in the plural: amico, a friend, amici, friends; teologo, theologian, teologi, theologians; though to this there are many exceptions.

Nouns ending in io short, in which there is no accent on the i, form their plural in j: principio, principle, principi, principles; tempio, temple, tempi, temples. Attempts are making to exclude the j from the Italian alphabet, and to write these plurals with ii; but this appears liable to objections, which are shortly noticed under the letter J.

Nouns ending in io long, in which there is an accent on the i, form their plural in ii: zio, uncle, zii, uncles; ronzio, buzz, ronzii, buzzes.

A few nouns are irregular in the plural. Uomo, man, uomini, men; moglie, wife, mogli, wives; bue, ox, buoi, oxen; Dio, God, dei, gods.

There are some nouns ending in o in the singular, which form their plural in a changing their gender into the feminine; others have two terminations in the plural, both in i, and a; but it would be beyond the limits of a very concise grammar to enter into these at length.

OF ADJECTIVES.

Of qualificative Adjectives.

The usual terminations of qualificative adjectives in Italian in the singular are o and e: the former change the o into a for the feminine, the latter are of both genders. Adjectives form their plurals in the same manner as substantives. Buon uomo, a good man, BUONI uomini, good men; buona donna, a good woman, buone donne, good women; regno felice, a happy kingdom, regni felici, happy kingdoms; moglie felice, a happy wife, mogli felici, happy wives.

The place of adjectives either before or after the substantives, is, for the most part, indifferent in Italian: un forte regno, or un regno forte, a strong kingdom; una fiorente città or una città fiorente, a flourishing city.

In some cases however the adjective must perforce be placed after the substantive, as adjectives of shape, color, nation, ec. una piazza bislunga, an oblong square; un cappello bianco, a white hat; i patrioti italiani, the Italian patriots, etc.

Also when the adjective is emphatic, it must be placed after the substantive. Ecco un uomo forte! that is a strong man.

Of the degrees of comparison.

The comparative of adjectives is formed in Italian by prefixing più (more) to the comparative, and il più (the most) to the superlative, without any regard to the number of syllables comprised in the positive. Thus, grande, great; più grande, greater; il più grande, the greatest; magnifico, magnificent; più magnifico, more magnificent; il più magnifico, the most magnificent, and so for all others.

Of Pronominal demonstrative adjectives.

The pronominal demonstrative adjectives this and that, questo e quello, change their terminations both for gender and number much after the manner of qualificative adjectives:

This man.	Quest'uomo.	That country.	Quel paese.
These men.	Questi uomini.	Those countries.	Quei paesi.
This woman.	Questa donna.	That city.	Quella città.
These women.	Queste donne.	Those cities.	Quelle città.

There are also other terms in Italian to express this and that, as cotesto, codesto, cotesta, codesta, that, cotesti, coteste, those; costui or colui, this or that man, costoro or coloro, these or those men; costei or colei, this or that woman, costoro or coloro, these or those women.

Of Pronominal possessive adjectives.

The Pronominal possessive adjectives, my, mio; thy, tuo; his, her, it, suo; our, nostro; your, vostro; their, loro; also change their terminations both for gender and number. They are for the most part preceded by the definite article il, i, la, le.

SINGULAR.

1 st person,	my.	Il mio, la mia.
2 ^d person,	thy.	Il tuo, la tua.
3 ^d person,	masculine,	his.
	feminine,	her.
	neuter,	its.

PLURAL.

1 st person,	our.	Il nostro, la nostra.
2 ^d person,	your.	Il vostro, la vostra.
3 ^d person,	their.	Il loro, la loro.

Possessive adjectives agree in Italian with the thing possessed, and not, as in English, with the possessor :

This is her watch.	Questo è il suo oriuolo.
This is his house.	Questa è la sua casa.

They may be placed either before or after the substantive :

This is his farm. Questo è il suo podere, or il podere suo.

My relations, friends, &c. is expressed in Italian by i miei, the words parenti, amici, etc. being understood : so also with the other persons, i tuoi, i suoi, etc.

A friend of mine is expressed by un mio amico, or uno de' miei amici, etc.

These adjectives are repeated in Italian with every substantive, especially when the genders or numbers are different: my father, mother, and brothers, mio padre, mia madre ed i miei fratelli.

Of indeterminate adjectives.

The following is a list of the indeterminate adjectives :

Other, others.	Altro, altra, altri, altre.
Any one, other people.	Altri, altrui.
Each other, one another.	L'un l'altro.
The one and the other, both.	L'uno e l'altro.
Either the one or the other.	O l'uno o l'altro.

OF PRONOUNS.

Of personal Pronouns.

Personal pronouns in Italian are either absolute or conjunctive. As in English, they are divided into the first, second, and third persons. The conjunctive pronouns are those in oblique cases which are governed by verbs. Their proper use constitutes one of the great beauties of the language.

First person.

SINGULAR.				PLURAL.
				Conjunctive.
Nom.	I.	Io.		Nom.	We.	noi.
Gen.	Of me.	di me.		Gen.	of us.	di noi.
Dat.	to me.	a me.	mi.	Dat.	to us.	a noi.	ci or ne.
Acc.	me.	me.	mi.	Acc.	us.	noi.	ci or ne.
Abl.	from etc. me.	da me.		Abl.	from etc. us.	da noi.

Second person.

Nom.	Thou.	Tu.		Nom.	You.	Voi.
Gen.	of thee.	di te.		Gen.	of you.	di voi.
Dat.	to thee.	a te.	ti.	Dat.	to you.	a voi.	vi.
Acc.	thee.	te.	ti.	Acc.	you.	voi.	vi.
Abl.	from etc. thee.	da te.		Abl.	from etc. you.	da voi.

Third person masculine.

Nom.	He.	Egli, ei, e.		Nom.	They.	Eglino.
Gen.	of him.	di lui.		Gen.	of them.	di loro.
Dat.	to him.	a lui.	gli.	Dat.	to them.	a loro.
Acc.	him.	lui.	lo.	Acc.	them.	loro.	li, gli.
Abl.	from etc. him.	da lui.		Abl.	from etc. them.	da loro.

Third person feminine.

Nom.	She.	Ella.		Nom.	They.	Elleno.
Gen.	of her.	di lei.		Gen.	of them.	di loro.
Dat.	to her.	a lei.	le.	Dat.	to them.	a loro.
Acc.	her.	lei.	la.	Acc.	them.	loro.	le.
Abl.	from etc. her.	da lei.		Abl.	from etc. them.	da loro.

These pronouns, when in the nominative case, are usually understood as in Latin, except when used emphatically.

I go to London every spring.	-Vado a Londra ogni primavera.
We dine at five.	-Pranziamo alle cinque.
I did it, and not you.	L'ho fatto io, e non voi.

When conjunctive, they may either precede or follow the verb. Except in the cases after mentioned, they are now usually placed before the verb, especially in familiar conversation :

I saw him yesterday.	Lo vidi ieri.
She sees us every day.	Ci vede ogui giorno.
I will see them to-morrow.	Li vedrò domani.

They are placed after the verb, and joined to it, when in the infinitive, the imperative affirmative, the gerund, and the past participle :

He came to see us.	Venne a vederci.
Give it me.	Datemelo.
On seeing him.	Vedendolo.
Having spoken to him.	Parlatogli.

These conjunctive pronouns are not used in emphatical phrases :

Give it to me, not to him.	Datelo a me, non a lui.
-----------------------------------	--------------------------------

Gli, as accusative plural, is used only before verbs beginning with a vowel or an s impura:

I hate them.	Gli odio.
I esteem them.	Gli stimo.

The reflexive pronouns are formed in Italian by adding stesso to the personal pronouns I, io etc.

I myself.	Io stesso or stessa.
Thou thyself.	Tu stesso or stessa.
He himself.	Egli stesso.
She herself.	Ella stessa.
We ourselves.	Noi stessi or stesse.
You yourselves.	Voi stessi or stesse.
They themselves.	Eglino stessi or elleno stesse.

Of relative Pronouns.

Who, which, that.	Che , il quale.
The man whom or that I see.	L'uomo che or il quale vedo.
What, which.	Quale .
I do not know what sort of a man he is.	Non so quale uomo egli sia.
Whose, whom.	Cui .
My father, whose passions were roused.	Mio padre, le cui passioni furono alzate.
The man from whom I received that favor.	L'uomo da cui ho ricevuto quel favore.
That which, what.	Ciò che , quel che .
That is what I want.	Quello è ciò che voglio.
Which.	Il che .
His extravagance ruined him, which might have been expected.	La sua stravaganza lo ruinò, il che si sarebbe potuto aspettare.

Che is invariable. Il quale varies both in gender and number. Cui is used for all cases except the nominative. Il che is used for which when it refers to an antecedent sentence.

The relative pronoun is always expressed in Italian.

Of interrogative Pronouns.

Who? Whom?	Chi?
Who is there?	Chi è là?
Whom do I see?	Chi vedo?
What?	Che?
What are you doing?	Che (cosa) fate?
What? Which?	Quale, quali.
What is your opinion?	Qual' è il vostro parere?
Which is your brother?	Qual' è vostro fratello?

Chi? is applied to persons only; che? to things; quale? to both persons and things.

Of indeterminate Pronouns.

The following is a list of the indeterminate pronouns, some of which are used adjectively:

Other, others.	Altro, altra, altri, altre.
Any one, other people.	Altri, altrui.
Each other, one another.	L'un l'altro.
The one and the other, both.	L'uno e l'altro.
Either the one or the other.	O l'uno o l'altro.
Neither the one nor the other.	Nè l'uno nè l'altro.
Each, for each.	Ciascuno, ciascheduno, per uno.
Some.	Alquanto.
Some, any.	Alcuno, qualche (invariabile ed impiegato solamente al singolare).
Some one, some body, any body.	Qualcheduno, qualcuno.
Nobody, no one, none.	Nessuno, nissuno, niuno, veruno, nullo.
Not one.	Nè pur uno.

Some one, somebody.	Taluno.
All, whole.	Tutto.
As much as.	Quanto.
As many as.	Quanti.
So much.	Tanto.
So many.	Tanti.
As much.	Altrettanto.
As many.	Altrettanti.
Whatever, whatsoever.	Qualsiasi, qualsivoglia.
Such.	Tale.
Such as.	Cotale.
Such other.	Altrettale.
Each, every.	Ogni.
Whoever, whosoever.	Chiunque, chicchessia, chi che.
Whatever, whatsoever.	Cicchessia, checchè.
Whatever.	Qualunque.
Whatsoever.	Quantunque.

OF VERBS.

There are three conjugations of verbs in Italian, which, like those in Latin, are distinguished by the termination of the infinitive mood:

The first conjugation ends in	are: cantare, to sing.
The second	ere: credere, to believe.
The third	ire: venire, to come.

Short conjugation of the verb cantare, root cant:

SINGULAR.		INDICATIVE MOOD.		PLURAL.
Present,	canto, i, a,	I sing etc.	cantiamo, ate, ano.
Imperfect,	cantava, i, a.	I was singing etc.	cantavamo, avate,avano.
Perfect,	cantai, asti, ò.	I sang etc.	cantammo, asto, arono.
Future,	cantèrò, erai, erà.	I shall sing etc.	canteremo, erete, eranno.
Conditional,	canterei, eresti, erebbe.	I should sing etc.	canteremmo, ereste, erebbero.

IMPERATIVE MOOD.

Present or future, canta, i. sing etc. cantiamo, ate, ino.

SUBJUNCTIVE MOOD.

Present, canti, i, i. If I sing etc. cantiamo, iate, ino.
Imperfect, cantassi, assi, asse. If I sang etc. cantassimo, aste, assero.
Gerund, cantando. Singing.
Past part. cantato. Sung.

Short conjugation of the verb credere, root cred:

Imperfect, sentissi, issi, esse. If I felt etc. sentissimo, iste, issero.
Gerund, sentendo. Feeling.
Past part. sentito. Felt.

A large class of verbs in ire is conjugated somewhat differently; this difference is observable only in the present of the indicative, in the imperative, and in the present of the subjunctive.

The following short conjugation of three tenses of the verb finire, to finish, root fin, shews the difference above alluded to.

INDICATIVE MOOD.
SINGULAR.		PLURAL.
Present , finisco, ci, co.	I finish etc.	finiamo, ite, iscono.
IMPERATIVE MOOD.
Present or future , finisci, isca.	Finish etc.	finiamo, ite, iscano.
SUBJUNCTIVE MOOD.
Present , finisca, isca, isca.	If I finish etc.	finiamo, iate, iscano.

It would be inconsistent with the brevity of this grammar to give a list of the irregular Italian verbs, the irregularities being far more complicated than those in English, and being given at length in the several grammars to which the student is generally referred: it would be equally inconsistent to state the employment of the different moods and tenses in Italian, as contradistinguished from those employed in similar cases in English; especially as regards the subjunctive mood, which is far more generally adopted in the former than in the latter language: I shall therefore terminate with briefly referring to an error very prevalent with the English, that namely of employing the imperfect instead of the perfect tense, in cases in which they would never think of doing so in their own language: for instance, it is very common to hear an Englishman say « io vedeva vostro padre ieri; io pranzava ieri ad un tal posto; instead of io vidi, io pranzai; which is precisely the same as if they said. « I was seeing your father yesterday; I was dining yesterday at such a place. » The student should consider whether this form could be correctly adopted in English, in which case he might safely use the imperfect; as, for instance. « I was dining yesterday, when your brother came in, io PRANZAVA ieri quando vostro fratello entrò; I was reading this book when I was interrupted, io LEGGEVA questo libro quando fui interrotto. » If was with the present participle cannot be used in English, the perfect should be adopted. The rule is a simple one, and a very slight attention to it would prevent the recurrence of what may be considered a common and somewhat grave error.

DIZIONARIO

INGLESE-ITALIANO E ITALIANO-INGLESE.

A.

A, è la prima lettera della lingua inglese, come pure delle più delle altre lingue. Ha questa quattro suoni in inglese; il primo lungo, come in fate, destino; grazie, grazia; il secondo largo, come in ball, ballo; call, chiamare; alquanto accorciato, come in squat, quatto; what, che, quale: il terzo aperto, che s'assomiglia molto all'a italiano, come in father, padre; rather, piuttosto, accorciato come in China, Cina: e l'ultimo breve, come in hat, cappello; marry, maritarsi.

A, serve come prefisso a molte parole inglesi, come in asleep, addormentato; awake, svegliato; afoot, a piede; aground, in terra, &c.

Il primo suono dell'a corrisponde all'e chiusa in italiano, come nelle parole fama, fear; cena, supper &c.

Il secondo suono s'assomiglia al dittongo au, nella parola auro, fall, cadere.

Il terzo suono è come l'a in italiano, padre, father, fama, fame, &c.

Il quarto suono è molto simile all'a italiano nelle parole abbracciare, to embrace, abbandonare, to abandon, &c.; quantunque sia un poco meno largo.

A, [e] art. uno, una; twice a day, due volte il giorno; so much a man, tanto per uomo.

E.

E, è muta alla fine di parola, eccettuato nelle monosillabe, o nelle parole greche e latine: the, il; he, egli; she, ella, etc. apostrophe, apostrofo, etc. Ma l'e, quantunque muta in fine di parola, allunga la vocale che la precede: fat, grasso, fat, destino, etc. E, è pure muta nei tempi passati dei verbi: loved, amato etc.: eccettuato quando viene preceduta da d, o i: added, aggiunto; permitted, permesso. E puro muta quando è seguita da w; ed allora il w prende od il suono dell'u italiano, o dell'*i*u. Seguita da i, l'e prende il suono del e italiana in meno. In fine di una sillaba non accentata, o quando fa sillaba da sé, senza l'accento, ha molto del suono dell'i italiano breve nella parola Italia. E raddoppiata suona come i lungo italiano in frina.
